Obligations of the authors

Good scientific practice, errors

Authors who publish in the Philosophisches Jahrbuch adhere to the rules of good scientific practice. If authors notice an error in the manuscript before or after publication, they must notify the editors immediately via the editorial office and cooperate with the editors to enable a correction to be made.

Plagiarism

Authors may only submit original manuscripts and must make it clear that material or ideas from other authors have been used in direct and indirect quotations. Authors wishing to publish in the Philosophisches Jahrbuch are advised to consult the author's notes on citations available here before submitting their manuscript.

Duplicate and redundant publication

Duplicate or redundant publication ("self-plagiarism") occurs when a work or significant parts of a work are published more than once by the author or authors of the work without a corresponding cross-reference or justification for the overlap. This can be in the same or a different language.

The Philosophisches Jahrbuch does not publish any publications that significantly overlap with other publications, unless the "double publication" is able to stimulate academic discourse. This requires the clear consent of the copyright holder of the original publication and the citation of the original source.

The deposit of a preprint on the author's personal website, in an institutional repository or in a preprint archive is not considered an earlier or duplicate publication.

Manuscripts submitted to the Philosophisches Jahrbuch for publication may only be offered for publication elsewhere once the review process has been completed.

Authorship

Only those who have made a significant contribution to the submitted article can be listed as authors.

Use of AI

Authors who use AI tools in the writing of a manuscript, production of images or graphical elements of the paper, or in the collection and analysis of data, must be transparent in disclosing in the Materials and Methods (or similar section) of the paper how the AI tool was used and which tool was used. Authors are fully responsible for the content of their manuscript, even those parts produced by an AI tool, and are thus liable for any breach of publication ethics.

Disclosure obligation and conflicts of interest

The authors of the Philosophisches Jahrbuch are expected to disclose any source of financial support they have received for the production of the manuscript. The authors must also inform the editors of any circumstances that could make the article appear to be the result of commissioned research.

Duties of the experts

Every manuscript submitted by potential authors to the Philosophisches Jahrbuch is evaluated on the basis of a double-blind review process. The review process takes an average of three months. The reviewers' recommendations are communicated to the editors. The authors receive extracts from the evaluation in which the reviewers' decision is explained and, if necessary, suggestions for revision. The experts are expected to disclose any potential conflicts of interest.

Obligations of publishers and editors

Publishers and editors

The editors of the Philosophisches Jahrbuch support the acquisition of authors and the review process. Annual editorial meetings are held to prepare and make strategic decisions. The editorial board members are experts in the fields on which the Philosophisches Jahrbuch publishes. They work together with the editors in the recruitment and review of contributions.

Role of the editorial team during the peer review process

At the beginning of the double-blind review process for manuscripts, the editors decide who the reviewers of a submission will be; only if they are informed about the identity of the author can they judge whether the relationship between author and reviewer is too close. In the search for suitable reviewers, the editorial team draws on the expertise of the scientific advisory board and the specialist knowledge of proven colleagues in the relevant field of research.

Violations of good scientific practice

In cases where a review contains unfair remarks, the editorial team deletes these and converts them into professional criticism before forwarding the (anonymised) review. If plagiarism is detected after publication, Nomos Verlag will immediately stop distribution of the title until the case has been clarified.

Confidentiality and conflicts of interest

No information about a submitted manuscript will be passed on to persons other than authors, reviewers, potential reviewers, or members of the editorial team. If an editor has a conflict of interest regarding a manuscript, he/she will relinquish his/her role in the review process and ask another member of the editorial team to take over the editing.

Obligations and role of the publisher

Contract guidelines

Verlag Karl Alber attaches particular importance to the high quality of its journal portfolio and monitors compliance with editorial quality standards for the articles published in the Philosophisches Jahrbuch. Our general ethical publishing guidelines can be found here.

Publication decisions, copyright

Nomos Verlag and the editors accept no responsibility for unsolicited manuscripts. By accepting a manuscript, the publisher acquires all rights from the authors, in particular the right to further reproduction for commercial purposes by photomechanical or other techniques. Detailed information on Nomos' copyright policy can be found here.

Fees

Authors who wish to publish in the Philosophisches Jahrbuch are not obliged to pay fees for article processing or submission.
